

A large, ornate float is the centerpiece of a parade in a town square. The float is decorated with a large, golden, bell-shaped structure on the left and a large, red and yellow costume figure in the center. Several people are seated on the float, including a man in a red and yellow costume. The float is moving through a street lined with brick buildings. Spectators are visible on the sidewalks, and a person in a white shirt and black pants is walking alongside the float.
